any Irishman deserving the name would try to injure Lady Dixie. Her mother is an out-and-out Nationalist, and that fact alone, apart from the regard due to the gentle sex, would guard the daughter of the Dowager Marchioness of Queensberry from insult and violence. In fact, the motive for this alleged outrage, no less than for the Phoenix Park murders and the London explosions, must appear inexplicable to most people on any other theory than that its authors are, whether secretly or openly, deadly enemies of Irish nationality. "This agitation," says Michael D. Gallagher, President of the Parnell Land League of New York, "is all got up by the British Government. The Land League knows nothing about this. Its plans are to have an entirely peaceable agitation." But unfortunately for this theory of Government authorship, the revelations in connection with the Phoenix Park murders and other similar outrages fasten these crimes exclusively upon a secret society known as the "Irish Invincibles," whose members are composed of the lowest dregs of the former Fenian organizations in the United Kingdom and whose revolting deeds are applauded by the similar dregs of that once powerful movement in this country.

And still more unfortunately for this theory of Government connivance, one of the most eloquent Irish nationalist leaders, represented by Patrick Ford, editor of the New York Irish World, openly countenances the dynamite scheme, of which the London explosions are an example, while another set of revolutionary leaders, represented by O'Donovan Rossa, editor of the New York United Irishman, have openly and deliberately adopted it as a national policy. The only plausible ground for connecting Patrick Ford and O'Donovan Rossa with the English Government is that they are effectually playing into its hands; but this ground of itself is inadequate, as Irish "patriots" of their advanced class are entirely too numerous in this country to be all subsidized by the English secret service money which is so liberally supplied from Dublin Castle. No one of common sense would suppose that any organization headed by the Irish leader, or which can be fairly said to represent the Irish people, is responsible for the London explosions or the attempt on the life of Lady Florence Dixie. But both these acts are so thoroughly in keeping with the cowardly methods of the "Irish Invincibles" and their aiders and abettors in this country, that until the contrary is proven, the world is certain to hold them responsible, whether correctly or not. Patrick Ford and Henry George have held that Judge Lawson was right when he claimed that the Irish land laws, as they existed before Parnell's agitation, were fully as good as the land laws of other countries. Judge Lawson is more likely to be right now in attributing the explosion in London and the attack on Lady Florence Dixie to the "final efforts of the scotch-reptile of lawlessness" in its flight from the Irish capital.

An intelligent London correspondent of a weekly contemporary, speaking as a hostile witness, says that the Irish leader, "despite his associations, is a gentleman, not alone by birth, but by education and manner." And in view of recent revelations an evening contemporary would now like to know "what Parnell thinks in all sincerity of his brother agitators." But the answer is not far to seek. "I suppose," said Parnell, in reply to Foster, "if there is one newspaper that I differ with more than another, that I have read less of, that I have studied less, it is the Irish World. And for the very good reason that Mr. Ford, in his office in Brooklyn or New York, chooses to direct his newspaper for the purpose of destroying or attempting to destroy the movement which we have been so carefully building up in Ireland. Mr. Patrick Ford's aims, objects and programme are not my aims or objects, but they may be much more likely the aims and objects of the right honorable gentleman, the late Chief Secretary." Parnell, in fact, believes what should be plain to every one, that his so-called brother agitators in this country and in the United Kingdom who have adopted criminal methods are working on the side of the British Government and are the worst enemies of the Irish people.

The obnoxious course Lady Florence Dixie has recently taken in opposition to the Irish leaders is easily explained. Her political creed she has adopted from her mother, who in an evil day accepted Patrick J. Smyth, the liberator of John Mitchell, and once the idol of Irish Nationalists, as her "guide, counselor and friend." Smyth's hatred of Parnell is only exceeded by his hatred of the Land League. "I," said he, when last remonstrating with his Tipperary constituents, "you are not lost to every sense of patriotic and human feeling, for a land reduced to a condition of savagery. See the poor and honest man shot down in his cabin in the midst of his little ones. See the gentle and blameless lady massacred in her carriage. See these things and reserve your curses for that league of hell that has brought all this ruin, all this shame and dishonor upon our nation." This indiscriminate hatred of Ireland's successful land movement was naturally shared by the Dowager Marchioness of Queensberry and her daughter, and the latter, becoming an easy prey to the misrepresentations of Richard Pigott, once the most extreme "patriot" in Ireland, has taken strong grounds against the management of the Land League funds, which, according to her views, have been improperly diverted from charitable use. But Parnell's statesmanlike policy is sustained by the great body of Irish Nationalists at home and abroad, and is the fact, coupled with the prospect that the criminal element, which is now working on the side of the British Government, will be finally put down by the Irish people themselves, that the one great hope of Ireland.—S. F. Chronicle.

THE AUSTRO-ITALIAN ALLIANCE.

The alliance between Austria and Italy is the most important of recent political events in Europe. It is undoubtedly the result of Bismarck's diplomacy, though Germany is only indirectly mentioned, and is inspired by dislike and fear of France. The hatred felt by the Italians for the French is apparently inexplicable. "The intimate connection they have formed with Austria is scarcely less so. Austria is Italy's traditional enemy and oppressor, holding not twenty years ago, Venice and nearly all of Lombardy. In the first treaty after the Austrians had been expelled by the Tyrol and Trieste, whose inhabitants are Italian by language and tradition. Without the assistance of France Italy would to-day be a mere group of provinces without national unity or foreign influence. But while the party of Italy Undenounced, Italy, Austria, for her retention of Trieste and the Tyrol, they also have with Austria closed, being able to dictate the terms of peace; he saw fit to secure possession of Nice, sacred to Italian democrats as having kept the Pope in Rome by means of a French army for many years after the ancient city was ceded by the Government for a capital. These considerations, the remembrance of former benefits, and the extension of French authority over the northern part of Africa, changed the kindly feeling once felt to antipathy.

It would seem, as if an alliance between the French and Italians were natural and desirable. The two nations are closely related by blood. They have powerful navies that, united, might easily control the Mediterranean. One is a republic, while the other is a constitutional monarchy, yet the difference in form of government is more apparent than real. A western alliance including Italy, France and England, would have been in the interest of freedom, and might have offset the overshadowing importance of Austria and Germany in Central Europe. As it is, Bismarck is moulding Continental politics of dynastic to his own plans, first binding Austria to Germany as a mutual defence against Russia, and then compelling Austria and Italy to make a treaty, thus withdrawing from France her only possible ally. As to England, she takes advantage of Continental broils to further her Colonial interests, and, presuming on her insular position, keeps as clear as possible of entangling alliances with her neighbors and rivals. The Austro-Italian alliance is also another step in the formation of international plans to thwart the social elements which are proving so troublesome to European governments. Measures looking to a further centralization of power in the crown are expected in Germany, while France, as a republic, is regarded on general principles as an enemy and a disturber of the aristocratic peace of Europe. For any reaction in favor of absolutism in Germany or elsewhere, those who love constitutional liberty will have to thank the Anarchists, who, with their gospel of dynamite, have brought it under suspicion, and made the middle classes prefer safety with thrones and imperial rescripts to insecurity for life and property, with freedom of the people and universal suffrage.—San Francisco Bulletin.

ETNA.

Etna, the most famous of volcanoes, is again in agitation and promises another eruption, like some of those that have in past times carried death and destruction to the smiling towns and villages that cluster on its slopes. There are two cities and sixty-three towns, of all sizes, on the mountain having a population, with the agricultural districts about them, of not less than 300,000 souls. Etna differs in some respects from other celebrated volcanoes. Its eruptions, whether more or less terrible, have a general resemblance. They are preceded by earthquakes, which are sometimes felt as far as Cyprus. Riffs open down the mountain sides, from which sand, smoke, ashes and scoriae are poured with great violence. Lofy cones are thrown up to the height of 800 or 1000 feet. Similar phenomena are sometimes observed in the eruptions of Vesuvius, the volcanoes in Iceland and in other parts of the world, but the peculiarities of Etna give it an individuality that has made it famous since it was first celebrated by the writers of Ancient Greece and Rome, and the old fable of Enceladus has been verified by Longfellow.

Some of the historical eruptions of Etna have been even more destructive to life than that overflow of Vesuvius that buried Pompeii and Herculaneum so deep that they were forgotten for 1700 years. In 1669 thirty or forty inhabitants and some twenty villages were totally destroyed. The stream of lava ran fifteen miles in four days, and reaching the walls of Catania, which were sixty feet high, rose slowly to their top and poured over in a continuous cataract of fire. In 1693 an earthquake destroyed 18,000 of the people of Catania, and of people living on the slopes of the mountain no less than 100,000. Other eruptions have been less destructive. The most important of the present century, none of which have been so violent as the two specified, have occurred in 1805, 1809, 1811-12, 1819, 1831 and 1852. Remembering the terrible past and living on a crust of lava that bends and aways at the slightest movement of the forces within, it is no wonder that Etna is regarded with awe and every sign of activity feared as pre-aging a storm of fire and lava that may destroy a score of pleasant towns and a hundred thousand lives.—Chronicle.

VISITS OF THE LIVING TO THE DEAD.

In 1654 the coffins containing the bodies of Charles V and his descendants were removed from the vault in front of the high altar in the Church of the Escorial to their final resting-place in the Pantheon. "As the body of Charles V was placed in his marble sarcophagus," writes Sir W. Stirling-Maxwell (Cleric of Life of Charles V, 1853, p. 279), "the coverings were removed to enable Philip IV to come face to face with his great ancestor. The corpse was found to be quite entire, and even some sprigs of sweet thyme, folded in the winding sheet, retained, said the friars, all their fragrant fragrance after the lapse of four score winters." But once more the resolute countenance of the victor of Muhlberg was to be seen by a degenerate successor. Toward the end of the Eighteenth century, Charles III of Spain, at the request of the author of Vathek, ordered the marble sarcophagus which contained the body of the famous Emperor of the West to be removed from its niche and the lid to be raised. The features, so well known from the portraits by Titian, were still unchanged, and the wild thyme, gathered in the Vero de Plasencia by the hermitic friars more than two centuries before, was fresh and sweet.

In 1813, while a passage was being constructed under the choir of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, an aperture was accidentally made in one of the walls of Henry VIII's vault. Three coffins were seen, and it was supposed that one of them might hold the remains of Charles I. The vault was examined in the presence of George IV and other distinguished persons, among whom was Sir Henry Hallford, and to the work published by him ("An Account of the Opening of the Coffin of Charles I," 4to, 1813.) I am indebted for the details of the interesting incident. On opening the coffin supposed to contain the remains of the unfortunate monarch, the body was wrapped in a cloth, and the damp folds about the face adhered so closely, that on being detached it was found to retain an impression of the royal countenance—a circumstance which to the loyalists would doubtless recall the legend of St. Veronica. The head was found to be separate from the body, and the back hair of the head was cut short at the neck to facilitate the headman's task. But no circumstantial evidence was required to prove that the remains of Charles I. had at last been found. The long oval face and the brown pointed beard, which the pencil of Van Dyck has rendered so familiar to us, were at once recognized. When the face was first seen the left eye was full and open, but it vanished almost immediately on exposure to the air. After a short time, when the identity of the remains was placed beyond a doubt, the coffin was closed and the vault was fastened up. One more interview with the dead must be told through this case: the body had not been touched for some years ago the family vault of the Stanbourn family was, for some necessary reason, opened, and the lid of the coffin which contained the body of the famous earl, the author of the Letter, was by accident removed. The skeleton was reclining on a white satin coverlet, and the cranium propped up on a cushion of the same material with a courtly air of repose which was very remarkable, and which made a great impression on those who were present. I was not an eye-witness of the event, but relate the occurrence as it was told to me. It may be mentioned incidentally that the late earl was not originally buried in the family vault, but in the church at Brethay.

MR. MOORE begs to recommend his GOGO SHAMPOO WASH
to the public as unrivalled by any preparation ever produced for promoting the growth of the hair. The basis of this compound is made of soap root; the natives of the Philippine Islands never use anything else for washing their hair; they are never found bald, and it is quite common to see the females with hair from 5 to 6 feet long. By constantly using this Shampoo Wash as directed, you will NEVER BE BALD.
The proprietor offers the Wash to the public entirely confident that by its restorative properties it will without fail arrest decaying hair. It completely eradicates scurf, dandruff, and cures all diseases of the scalp. It does not contain any poisonous drugs. By its cooling properties it always the itching and fever of the scalp, which is the great cause of people losing their hair.
Mr. MOORE has succeeded in being able to put this wash up in bottles without allowing it to ferment, and he will guarantee it to keep any
